MORE INTEREST IS TAKEN TODAY

Crowd at Noon Lunch to Boom
Chamber of Commerce Membership Canvass is Doubled.

VISITORS ALSO TAKE PART

Ten New Members Are Added Today
and Three Teams Were at Work
This Afternoon For More

The Chamber of Commerce prospects were booming today after the noon lunch at the Windsor hotel which was attended by thirteen men. This is the largest yet of the noon lunch crowds and the campaign for members was discussed enthusiastically.

Three teams were at work this afternoon and indications were that they would have several new members to turn in tomorrow. Ten new members were reported today and it is the hope of the workers that the increase may be doubled tomorrow.

The manufacturing district has not been visited at all yet and there are many men even in the business district of the city who have not been solicited because there are so many members who are enthusiastic, but who feel they can not devote any time to the work.

M. E. Foley of Indianapolis, who is here in the damage suit trial in the circuit court as attorney for the T. H. I. & E. Traction company, was at the luncheon with the boosters today and wished the workers success. He was scheduled to make a short talk on Chamber of Commerce work, but was called away to court before the lunch was finished. Several arrived late.

It is probable that arrangements may be made for both Mr. Foley and W. J. Beckett of Indianapolis, who is also an attorney in the case now on trial, to speak at the luncheon tomorrow at noon. It urged that any men who feel that they can give any time to the project, or even if they have no time to spare, turn out for the noon meetings and talk over the prospects. No time is lost by having the lunch.

W. T. BAKER BADLY INJURED

Aged Resident of Glenwood Sustains
Fractured Knee.

W. T. Baker, an aged resident of Glenwood, was seriously injured this morning, sustaining a fracture of the knee when he was kicked by a horse. Mr. Baker was brought to this city on the 11:37 traction car and taken to the Sexton sanatorium where he received medical attention. The injury is very serious, not only because of his advanced age, but because of the nature of the fracture. If Mr. Baker recovers it is probable that the leg will be stiff.

AN UNRULY BULL KNOCKS MAN DOWN

Charles Carr Escapes Serious if Not
Fatal Injuries Due to Fact
Animal Was Dehorned.

HIS BODY IS BADLY BRUISED

Charles Carr, brother of Owen L. Carr, was painfully injured by a Jersey bull at his farm west of the city yesterday. He started to drive the bull from one field to another and in doing so had to take him down the road. The bull determined to go in the opposite direction from that which Mr. Carr desired he should go. Mr. Carr had a pitchfork to enforce his commands.

The bull did not heed his wishes and went the wrong way. Mr. Carr jabbed the animal with the fork and the animal retaliated by knocking him down. Mr. Carr's arm was badly skinned and his body severely bruised. He was not so badly hurt, however, but that he got up and made the bull go into the field where he intended to drive it. The fact that the bull was dehorned saved Mr. Carr from serious or possibly fatal hurts. Dr. Charles H. Parsons was called to dress the wounds.

REPAIR IS MADE.

The break in the reservoir of the city plant was repaired last night without much difficulty. The water was shut off at nine o'clock. The city lights were twice shut off but for a short time only. The break in the wall was large enough to let out a great supply of water and it was estimated that enough escaped as would come from one of the wells.

DAMAGE SUIT STARTED TODAY

$10,000 Demanded of Traction Company For Death of William
Webber Near Greenfield.

CASE HEARD TWICE BEFORE

Both Times the Jury Failed to Reach
Verdict—Brought by Administrator of Estate.

The damage suit of Conrad Oste-meir, administrator of the estate of William E. Webber, deceased, against the Terre Haute, Indianapolis and Eastern Traction company started in the circuit court this morning. A jury was secured by noon and the opening statements were made directly after court opened for the afternoon session. $10,000 is the amount of damages demanded of the traction company.

It is alleged that through carelessness of the company William Webber was killed at a grade crossing. The accident occurred April 12, 1908, at a station known as Gem, which is about twelve miles west of Greenfield on the national road. Mr. Webber was driving along the highway, which parallels the traction line and turned south on the company's right of way. He was hit by a limited car from Indianapolis going to Newcastle. Mr. Webber was almost instantly killed.

It is alleged that the motorman did not blow the whistle until the car was almost on Mr. Webber and that the state law says the warning must be sounded not less than eighty rods from a crossing. W. J. Beckett, one of the attorneys for the plaintiff, in his opening statement to the jury stated that they had five witnesses who would testify that the whistle was not blown until the car was almost upon Mr. Webber.

This is the third time that the case has been tried. The first two times were in Hancock county where the accident occurred. The jury both times failed to reach a verdict and a change of venue was taken, the case eventually reaching this court. It is understood that the last time the case was heard the jury stood nine to three in favor of the defendant company. Webber left a widow and three children. The widow is appearing in court here.

The jury hearing the case is composed of the following men: Perry Gosnell, Jacob W. Hite, Ed V. Jackson, W. M. Bell, E. A. Kirkpatrick, Frank Reddick, Jesse Murphy, James Ed Caldwell, Roy Alexander, Charles N. Sweet, William Webster and John F. McKee.

Judge Megee appointed John Kuntz, John H. Hopp and Edward S. Jarrett appraisers in the suit of Jesse A. Shelton, trustee of Walker township against John L. Webster and Arnetta C. Webster, asking that real estate be assessed. Mr. Shelton desires the land owned by the defendants for a place for a school house. The appraisers are to report within five days according to the ruling of Judge Megee.

(By United Press.)

Washington, Feb. 3.—Despite the fact that neither the White House or the state department would discuss the matter, it was learned this afternoon from high sources that President Wilson will issue tomorrow an executive order raising the embargo against the exportation of arms across the American border to the Mexican Rebels. Members of the Senate foreign relations committee, who affected to know nothing, however, stated they were aware plans had been made.

I. & C. MEN BEFORE COMMISSION TODAY

Committee of Five Trainmen Present Two Grievances and First
Testimony is Offered.

THEY WANT FLAT WAGE SCALE

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Feb. 3.—Demands for a 35-cent an hour flat wage and better working conditions were made today before the public service commission by a committee of five men representing the trainmen of the Indianapolis & Cincinnati Traction company. The higher cost of living was the principal argument advanced in support of the demands. The company will reply to the men and the first testimony was to be offered this afternoon.

Five articles of grievances were submitted to the commission at the time of the recent strike and three were amicably adjusted without the assistance of the commission. The present wage scale is 21 to 30 cents an hour and the company would not grant the increase asked. The committee, composed of five employees of the road, was as follows: George Schrader, Albert Sparks, Irvin J. Meal, Samuel Warfuel and John Wilson.

F. Henry Schwegman has filed suit against Fred Merritt, Dora Merritt and William E. Bissenger, to foreclose a mortgage, demanding $450.

Representative Mann was freely applauded when he said: "We ought at this time to protect California against herself. I am not prepared to invite war with Japan or any other country. Now is the time to be cool."

EXPLAINS NEW EXPRESS RATES

Edgar E. Clark, Head of Interstate Commerce Commission, Discusses Changes in Effect Now.

ENDS INQUIRY OF FOUR YEARS

Lower Tariff Prescribed With Firm Belief it Afforded Express Companies Fair Compensation.

(By United Press.)

Washington, Feb. 3.—The most sweeping reduction in express rates ever inaugurated went into effect this week. Before issuing the new rates the Interstate Commerce Commission spent nearly four years in investigating the express business and Chairman Edgar E. Clark, head of the Commission, today consented to give the United Press an interview in which he described the events which culminated in the order which has just become effective.

"It was on June 8, 1912," said Chairman Clark, "that the Commission, through Commissioner Lane, now Secretary of the Interior, issued its first report in the investigation which has been conducted into the matter of express rates, practices, accounts and revenues. This investigation was prompted by a large number of complaints against charges, practices and regulations of express companies, and it was perhaps the most exhaustive and searching investigation the Commission has ever undertaken.

"Full investigation was had and consideration given to the financial affairs of the express companies, character of their organization, relationships they had with the railroads, the extent and nature of their property, the character of their services, basis of their rates, cost of their operation, manner in which their rates were stated, the relation of the service given by the express companies to that given by the railroad in the carriage of freight, the relationship between the rates of the express companies in different sections of the country for the same service, similarities and dissimilarities as between the express service in the United States and similar service in foreign countries, etc.

"Thirteen defendant express companies in 1911 transported more than 300,000,000 packages. They operated over 218,013 miles of steam railroad in the United States 18,385 miles of steamship and stage lines, and over 6,665 miles of electric lines. They paid to the rail, steamship and electric lines during that year $69,730,895, and their expenses were something over 64,000,000. The express companies' affairs and interests were interwoven through ownership of each others stock.

"Aside from the complaints of excessive charges, the complaints then before the Commission referred more particularly to double collections of lawful charges, overcharges and undercharges effecting discriminations between shippers arising out of an obscure rate system and ineffective accounting, indirect routing of shipments, etc., etc.

"Briefly, the Commission required a sweeping reduction in express charges, a new system of stating rates in tariffs, a new classification, use of prescribed labels for packages to avoid double collection of charges, proper provisions for revision of billing so as to insure collection of the lawful charges, routing arrangements which in effect make all of the express companies one and insure routing via the more direct junction points and lines, the establishment of a directory of free delivery limits, the establishment and reduction of insurance charges on shipments exceeding $50 in value and revision of regulations governing the transportation of shipments.

"On the matter of reduction in rates, the express companies naturally made every effort to convince the Commission that the reductions proposed were too far-reaching but at the end, while still expressing the view that as a matter of law the reductions were not proper, they announced their acceptance of the rates prescribed by the Commission and determination to give them a full and fair trial.

"The new plan necessitated an entire revision of the classifications and tariffs which was a work of such magnitude and which must be carefully done, and in order to provide time in which to do that work, the effective date of the Commission's order was postponed to February 1, 1914, upon which date the new system of rates become effective.

"The Commission prescribed the lower level of rates with the firm conviction that it afforded the express companies reasonable and just compensation for the service performed and a reasonable return upon the full value of all the property which they devote to the public service.

"The contracts between the express companies and the railroads provided that the railroads should receive for their part of the service a certain percentage of the gross earnings from the express business.

"In a general way it may be said that one half of the gross earnings thus went to the railroads.

"In determining the just and reasonable compensation for the express companies the commission did not accept the theory that these contracts between the express companies and the railroads were on a correct or equitable basis."

WILK AND COMPANY LOWEST BIDDERS

Awarded Contracts For Construction of Two Roads by County Commissioners Today.

ONE ROAD WAS REJECTED

The county commissioners awarded contracts for two roads this afternoon to Wilk & Company of this city. The two roads were the Fleener road in Jackson township and the Brown road in Orange township. The Hungerford road was also advertised but the commissioners rejected all bids and will readvertise. Wilk and Company was the low bidder on all three of the roads. The Horton road was not let because one of the viewers, Thomas McManus refused to sign, stating that they did not need a road.

The bids on the Fleener road were as follows: Wilk & Company, $4475; William Avery, $5,392; William Emsweller, $6,073. Only one bid was received on the Brown highway, that of Wilk & Company which was $4276. The Hungerford road, which was rejected attracted more bidders than any of the others. The bids were as follows: Wilk & Co., $4,971 and $5591; Emsweller, $4,989; Steel, $5,190; Henley, $5,148; H. Colter, $5,360.

Healthy Hair, Free From all Dandruff

Unightly, matted, scraggy hair is a sign of neglect—of dandruff, the hair destroyer.

Surely use Parisian Sage. It is a scientific preparation, based on a thorough knowledge of what is needed to cleanse the scalp and hair, keeping them perfectly healthy, stop scalp itch and falling hair, and make hair grow.

Get a 60-cent bottle from F. B. Johnson & Co. today—pour a little on a sponge or cloth and rub lightly over the hair, taking a small strand at a time—rub it into the scalp. Presto! the dandruff surely disappears; the hair is free from dust and excessive oil and is doubly beautiful. Try it now—it will not only save your hair and make it soft fluffy and abundant, but give it that incomparable gloss and beauty you desire.

Parcel Post Fails.

The parcel post system which Uncle Sam inaugurated the first of 1913 in the belief that the high cost of living would be throttled and the farmer would be greatly benefited by shipping his produce directly to the consumer in the city has failed utterly in bringing about such results, say officials of the Chicago post-office department. In reality the thing that has occurred is exactly that which the opponents of the parcel post system said would occur—that is, the system has worked out to the entire benefit of the big mail order houses in Chicago and to them alone. The Chicago post-office, which is one of the largest in the country, is now daily jammed to suffocation with parcel post packages which are being sent out by the big mail order houses, while little or no produce is handled as incoming parcels.

“The amount of food products that are shipped from agricultural districts today by parcel post is hardly worth considering,” declared Postmaster Campbell recently. “It is true that the friends of the parcel post argued that it would allow people in the cities to get farm products fresh from the country and that the system would cut out the middle man, make more money for the farmers, and cut down the high cost of living for the consumers. That has not been brought about. The farmers themselves do not appear to be clamoring for the parcel post in the handling of their products, and my personal experience is that they are content with the present methods of shipments.”

In the meantime, the mail order merchants in Chicago are saying nothing, but sawing wood.

Will It Be Split Trousers?

Washington, Feb. 3.—The “Pieddilly coat, the “semore” Norfolk jacket, and the tight-fitting trousers were discussed here today by the International Custom Cutters’ Association at the opening session of a four day convention. The Association is supreme in deciding the styles for men. If they ordered split trousers, split trousers would be the rage.

Many Compliments On New Features Are Received Daily

The Daily Republican has received many compliments for the many improvements it has made lately, including the up-to-the-minute news service which gives in concise but complete form the important happenings of the day outside of Rush county. This service enables the Republican to offer its readers not only the complete and full county news, but also the events of great importance outside.

The Republican is endeavoring to give its patrons all of the local news and a comparison will convince any skeptical person that the Republican gives as much local news as any other county seat newspaper—and then some. The Republican always invited comparison.

PLANS BEING COMPLETED

Forty-nine Counties Will Hold Sunday School Conventions.

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Feb. 3.—Plans are being completed by the Indianapolis Sunday School Association for the holding of the county Sunday school conventions in forty-nine counties, during the first half of 1914.

The golden jubilee convention to be held in Indianapolis, June 16 to 18 will be the center of interest in most of these county conventions, because of the competitive effort most of the counties are making to reach the “Front Line Standard of Efficiency,” which will entitle them to special honors in the convention.

Agitation for Abolishing Saturday Night Shopping in Evansville Continues Unabated.

HAVE HEARING ON QUESTION

(By United Press.)

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 3.—The agitation to abolish Saturday night shopping continues unabated. The Retail Merchants’ Association was scheduled to hear tonight from a committee of the Evansville Pastors’ Association which recently voted in favor of Friday night shopping and a Saturday afternoon and night holiday for the clerks.

It has been pointed out that Friday is Jewish service night. Monday night for shopping has been suggested. Mayor Bosse came out against shopping any night and proposed that people do their shopping in the day time, or if necessary, that instead of a half-holiday Saturdays that the shopping be done Saturday afternoon instead of Saturday night.

Divorce Complaint Says Husband Opposed Aid Society.

[Special to the Daily Republican.]

Newcastle, Ind., Feb. 3.—Because her husband objected to her belonging to the Ladies Aid society and cursed both her and the members of the same, in addition to the ministers, Mrs. Cora Reiser of Knights-town has filed suit for a divorce from Ralph Reiser. Mrs. Reiser also claims that her husband is an habitual drunkard and that he would slap and strike her, threaten to kill her, and break up the household furniture. The couple was married July 18, 1907, and separated October 13, 1913. Mrs. Reiser asks that her maiden name, Harris, be restored.

TELLING THINGS AS HE SEES THEM

Louis Ludlow, Former Washington Correspondent of the Indianapolis Star, Has Own Bureau.

TRUTH ABOUT PROGRESSIVES.

Many Assert New Party Has Fulfilled Its Mission and Return to Republican Fold.

Louis Ludlow, formerly connected with the Indianapolis Star as Washington correspondent, and who in that capacity was hired to write daily obituaries of the Republican party, and who recently severed his connection with that publication to operate a news bureau of his own, has the following unbiased opinion on the bull moose party and its future, which was published in several papers that use Ludlow's service:

The Progressive party, as a potential factor in national affairs, is passing away. There can be no doubt that its best assets are being liquidated with undeviating certainty into the hands of the Republican party and this process of political liquidation is going on steadily. The return of former Progressives to the Republican fold is now proceeding generally throughout the country. The exodus is of course greater in some sections and localities than in others, according to the strength of the middle-of-the-road leadership, but the longing "to go back home" is strong among the rank and file of the Progressives and nearly every community is now furnishing ocular evidence of the disintegration of the Progressive party.

It is generally conceded that there is no more progressively-inclined public man than Senator Bristow of Kansas. He has long been a fighter for progressive reforms. He voted against the Payne tariff bill. When asked his opinion as to the drift of events, he replied:

"I can speak advisedly as to Kansas. I know that in our state the Progressive party is rapidly going to pieces and the former Progressives are resuming their old alignment with the Republican party. The Progressive party, as a party organization, in my opinion, has served its purpose, which was a very laudable purpose, and it has forced reforms in the Republican party which were necessary.

"The possibility of abuses which led to the downfall of the Republican party has been eliminated. There is a very fine disposition on the part of the leaders of the Republican party to respond to the demands of the people and enact progressive legislation and I think the most effective way to help in that work and to serve the people is to remain in the Republican party and fight it out along the same lines as before. We shall win and the reforms which the people have so much at heart will be brought about through the Republican organization. I would like for all Progressives to help instead of dividing our forces and thereby render our work ineffective."

To be convinced that the Progressive party is falling to pieces one has only to glance over the newspaper files of the last few months and particularly the last few weeks. The desertion of former Comptroller Prendergast was a body-blow to the Progressive party in New York state. He is an able, influential, resourceful man. In Pennsylvania the decay of the third party is especially marked. The Bill Flinn element has lost control of the Republican state organization which has passed back into the hands of the old line Republicans. In Pennsylvania at the national election of 1912 the Progressives accomplished most remarkable results, but apparently there is scarcely a skeleton of the Progressive party in that state now. Backed by the full strength of the city administration of Pittsburg, headed by Mayor Magee and supported by the finances of William Flinn, the Progressive candidate, Mr. Porter was a favorite in the betting, but, despite this help, he was decisively beaten by Joseph Armstrong, who was backed by Senator Penrose. In Philadelphia the Progressives made hardly any showing at all.

The tale is the same in all parts of the country. The Progressives are everywhere returning to the Republican ranks. In New Jersey the Progressives made a lamentable showing. In that state where in 1912 Roosevelt beat Taft badly for second honors, Colby, the Progressive nominee for governor, was a poor third. He failed to carry a single county and his total vote was less than one-third that of Roosevelt.

In Maryland, where in 1912 Roosevelt had a small lead over Taft for second place, George L. Wellington, Progressive, in the election of a United States senator by direct vote of the people, received less than 10 per cent of the vote given Roosevelt.

Registration for the fall election is now going on in the state of California, and it is showing most remarkable results. In 1912 President Taft received some 4,000 votes in the entire state of California, but in this registration the Republicans are leading, with the Democrats second and the Progressives third. In some counties, as shown by the registration the Republicans outnumber the Progressives six to one, which is a pretty heavy slump for a former Roosevelt state. In other states district and county committeemen are resigning in numbers and going back to the Republican party. The recent action of the Republican national committee in directing a revision of the rules so as to embody progressive reforms in party management has given impetus to the movement away from the Progressive party.

If the Legislature Would Pass a Law---

That every vehicle user in Rush County had to buy his vehicles where he could get the best bargain for his money and leave it to the majority of vehicle users in the county to decide, you would have to buy your next one from us or break the law. There is no question about this, as the majority has already decided we give them more value for their money than they can get elsewhere and have backed up their judgment by buying their vehicles from us. The road service you can get out of one of our buggies makes it an easy proposition for us to sell a customer the second time and also makes it easy for us to sell his neighbors and friends as our vehicle users are always satisfied and make us customers. We still have a few of those nice, roomy Storm Buggies in stock and also have a sample of our 1915 Storm Buggy that you want to see. It is the first Storm Buggy ever built that has sliding doors that can not rattle and also has several new features you want to see. ## FREE LUNCH IS THING OF PAST

South Bend Saloon Keepers do Away With it Due to State Health Laws.

MUST PROVIDE A WAITER

(By United Press.)

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 3.—Free lunches in South Bend saloons are partly a thing of the past. And the reason for its banishment given by the saloon keepers is that the state health laws are too rigid for profit.

The patron must not help himself, says the law, but the saloon keeper must provide a waiter to serve it. Each patron must be given his individual sandwich on a plate; the waiter must put it there with a clean fork; and the supply must be continually kept under a cover.

A few saloon keepers pretend to know nothing of the agreement to banish the succulent winnie, and these barkeepers continue the free lunch. They say that the others will soon find it necessary to reinstall the counters.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The most economical, cleansing and germicidal of all antiseptics is

A soluble Antiseptic Powder to be dissolved in water as needed.

As a medicinal antiseptic for douches in treating catarrh, inflammation or ulceration of nose, throat, and that caused by feminine ills it has no equal. For ten years the Lydia E. The Mystery of the Boule Cabinet

By BURTON E. STEVENSON

Copyright, 1913, by Burton E. Stevenson.

CHAPTER VIII. A Distinguished Caller.

GODFREY and I examined the windowsill and the ground beneath it when I returned from my fruitless chase. "There is where he stood," he said, and the marks on the sill were evident enough.

We went slowly back to the house and Godfrey sat down again to a contemplation of the cabinet.

"It's too much for me," he said at last. "The only way I can find that drawer, I'm afraid, is with an ax. I'm going to look up the subject of secret drawers—perhaps I'll stumble upon something that will help me."

"And then, of course," I said disconsolately, "it is quite possible that there isn't any such drawer at all."

But Godfrey shook his head decidedly.

"I don't agree with you there, Lester. I'll wager that fellow who was looking in at us could find it in a minute. I'll have another try at it tomorrow. One thing we've got to take care of, and that is that our friend of the burning eyes doesn't get a chance at it first."

"Those shutters are pretty strong," I pointed out. "And Parks is no fool."

"Yes," agreed Godfrey, "the shutters are pretty strong—they might keep him out for ten minutes—scarcely longer than that. As for Parks, he wouldn't last ten seconds. This fellow's one of the greatest criminals of modern times. I think I would better drop a word to Simmonds and get him to send down a couple of men to watch the house. With them outside and Parks on the inside it ought to be fairly safe."

"I should think so," I said. "One would imagine you were getting ready to repel an army. Who is this fellow, anyway, Godfrey? You seem to be half afraid of him!"

"I'm wholly afraid of him if he's who I think he is. But it's a mere guess as yet, Lester. Wait a day or two. I'll call up Simmonds."

He went to the phone, while I sat down again and looked at the cabinet in a kind of stupefaction. Godfrey came back while I was still groping blindly amid this maze of mystery.

"It's all right," he said. "Simmonds is sending two of his best men to watch the house." He stood for a moment gazing down at the cabinet.

"I'm coming back tomorrow to have another try at it," he added. "I have left the gauntlet there on the chair, so if you feel like having a try yourself, Lester!"

"Heaven forbid!" I protested. "But perhaps I would better tell Parks to let you in. I hope I won't find you a corpse here, Godfrey!"

"So do I. But I don't believe you will. Yes, tell Parks to let me in whenever I come around. And now about Rogers."

"What about him?"

"I rather thought I might want to grill him tonight. But perhaps I would better wait till I get a little more to go on." He paused for a moment's thought. "Yes, I'll wait," he said finally. "I don't want to run any risk of failing."

We went out into the hall together, and I told Parks to admit Godfrey whenever he wished to enter. Rogers was still sitting on the cot, looking so crushed and sorrowful that I could not help pitying him. I said so to Godfrey as we went down the front steps.

"Perhaps you're right," he agreed. "Something has happened to him—something in connection with that woman—and he has never got over it. Well, we shall have to find out what it was. Hello! Here are Simmonds' men," he added as two policemen stopped before the house.

"Is this Mr. Godfrey?" one of them asked.

"Yes," said Godfrey.

"Mr. Simmonds told us to report to you, sir, if you were here."

"What we want you to do," said Godfrey, "is to watch the house—watch it from all sides—patrol clear around it and see that no one approaches it."

"Very well, sir." And the men touched their helmets.

"Perhaps if they concealed themselves," I suggested, "the fellow might venture back and be nabbed."

But Godfrey shook his head.

"I don't want him to venture back," he said. "I want to scare him off. I want him to see we're thoroughly on guard." He hailed a passing cab and paused with one foot on the step.

"I've already told you, Lester," he added over his shoulder, "that I'm afraid of him. Perhaps you thought I was joking, but I wasn't. I was never more serious in my life. The Record office," he added to the cabby and jingled away, leaving me staring after him.

Just before I turned in for the night in my own apartment I heard from Godfrey again, for my telephone rang, and it was his voice that answered.

"I just wanted to tell you, Lester," he said, "that your guess was right. The mysterious Frenchman came over on La Touraine, landing at noon yesterday. He came in the steerage and the stewards know nothing about him. What time was it he got to Vantine's?"

"About 2 I should say."

"So he probably went directly there from the boat, as you thought. That accounts for nobody knowing him. The steamship company is holding a bag belonging to him. I'll get them to open it tomorrow and perhaps we shall find out who he was. Good night!"

It was shortly after I reached the office next morning that the office boy came in and handed me a card with an awed and reverent air. An awed and reverent feeling crept over me also, for the card bore the name of Sereno Hornblower.

That name is quite unknown outside the legal profession of the three great cities of the east—New York, Boston and Philadelphia—yet Sereno Hornblower's income would make that of any other lawyer in the country look like 30 cents.

He is the confidential attorney of most of our "best families." He has held that position for years, and it is said that no case placed unreservedly in his hands ever resulted in a public scandal.

His reputation for tact and delicacy is tremendous, and yet those who have found themselves opposed to him have never been long in realizing that there was a most redoubtable mailed fist under the velvet glove. I had never met him either professionally or personally, and it was with some eagerness that I told the office boy to show him in at once.

He was a bluff and hearty man of middle age, rather heavy set, fresh faced and clean shaven and with very bright blue eyes.

We shook hands and he sat down and plunged at once without an instant's hesitation into the business which had brought him.

"Mr. Lester," he began, "I understand that you are the administrator of the estate of the late Philip Vantine?"

"Our firm is," I corrected.

"But you, personally, have been attending to his business? He was a collector of old furniture, I believe?"

"Yes."

"And on his last trip to Europe, from which he returned only a few days ago, he purchased of Armand & Son of Paris a Boule cabinet?"

I could not repress a start of astonishment.

"Are you acting for Armand & Son?" I queried.

"Not at all. I am acting for a lady whom, for the present, we will call Mme. X."

The thought flashed through my mind that Mme. X. and the mysterious Frenchwoman might be one and the same person. Then I put aside the idea as absurd. Sereno Hornblower would never accept such a client.

"Mr. Vantine did buy such a cabinet," I said.

"And it is in your possession?"

"There is at his residence a Boule cabinet which was shipped him from Paris, but only a few hours before his death. Mr. Vantine assured me that it was not the one he had purchased."

"You mean that a mistake had been made in the shipment?"

"That is what we supposed, and a cablegram from Armand & Son has since confirmed it."

"Where is the cabinet which Mr. Vantine did buy?"

"I have no idea. Perhaps it is still in Paris. But I am expecting a representative of the Armands to call very soon to straighten things out."

Again my companion fell silent, and sat rubbing his chin absently.

"It is very strange," he said finally. "If the cabinet was still at Paris, one would think it would have been discovered before my client made inquiry about it."

"There are a good many things which are strange about this whole matter," I supplemented.

"Would you have any objection to my client seeing this cabinet, Mr. Lester?"

It was my turn to hesitate.

"Mr. Hornblower," I said finally, "I will be frank with you. There is a certain mystery surrounding this cabinet which we have not been able to solve. I suppose you have read of the mysterious deaths of Mr. Vantine and of an unknown Frenchman, both in the same room at the Vantine house and both apparently from the same cause?"

"Do you mean that this cabinet is connected with them in any way?" he asked quickly.

"We believe so, though as yet we have been able to prove absolutely nothing. But we are guarding the cabinet very closely. I should not object to your client seeing it, but I could not permit her to touch it—not, at least, without knowing why she wished to do so. You will remember that you have told me nothing of why she is interested in it."

"I am quite ready to tell you the story, Mr. Lester," he said. "It is only fair that I should do so. After you have heard it, if you agree, we will take Mme. X. to see the cabinet. My client is a member of a prominent American family—a most prominent family. Three years ago she married a French nobleman. You can perhaps guess her name, but I should prefer that neither of us utter it."

"This nobleman has been both prodigal and unfaithful. He has scattered my client's fortune with both hands. I am free to confess that I consider her a fool not to have left him long ago. At last her trustees interfered, for her father had been wise enough to place a portion of his fortune in trust. They paid her husband's debts, placed him on an allowance and notified his creditors that his debts would not be paid again."

I had by this time, of course, guessed the name of his client.

"The allowance is a princely one," Mr. Hornblower continued, "but it does not suffice Monsieur X. No allowance would suffice him. So he has become a thief. He has taken to selling the objects of art with which his residences are filled and which are really the property of my client, since they were purchased with her money. About two weeks ago my client returned to Paris from a stay at her chateau in Normandy to find that he had almost denuded the town house. Among other things which he had taken was a Boule cabinet, which had been used by my client as her private writing desk. The cabinet was a most valuable one. But it is not its monetary value which makes my client so anxious to recover it."

He paused an instant and cleared his throat.

"Monsieur X. had had the decency," he went on, more slowly, "to, as he thought, retain his wife's private papers. He had caused the contents of the various drawers to be dumped out upon a chair. But there was one drawer of which he knew nothing—a secret drawer, known only to my client. That drawer contained a packet of letters which my client is most anxious to regain. She has given me to understand that their recovery is essential to her peace of mind."

I reflected a faithless husband has no reason to complain if his wife repays him in the same coin.

"My client went to work at once to regain the cabinet," continued Mr. Hornblower, plainly relieved that the thinnest ice had been crossed. "She found that it had been sold to Armand & Son. Hastening to their offices, she learned that it had been resold by them to Mr. Vantine and sent forward to him here. So she came over on the first boat, ostensibly to visit her family, but really to ask Mr. Vantine's permission to open the drawer and take out the letters. His death interfered with this, and in despair she came to me. I need hardly add that no member of her family knows anything about this matter, and it is especially important that her husband should never even suspect it. On her behalf I apply to you as Mr. Vantine's executor to restore these letters to their owner."

I sat for a moment turning this extraordinary story over in my mind. Surely Mme. X. would scarcely guard the secret of that drawer with poison.

"Does any one besides your client know of the existence of these letters?" I asked at last.

"I think not," answered Mr. Hornblower, smiling dryly. "They are not of a nature which my client would care to communicate to any one. We must get them back at any cost."

"As a matter of fact," I pointed out, "there are always at least two people who know of the existence of every letter—the person who writes it and the person who receives it."

"I had thought of that, but the person who wrote these letters is dead. He was killed in a duel some months ago by Monsieur X."

Mr. Hornblower sat regarding me, his lips pursed, as an indication, perhaps, that he would say no more.

But there was no necessity that he should. I knew enough of French law and of French habits of thought to realize that if those letters ever came into possession of Monsieur X., the game would be entirely in his hands. His wife would be absolutely at his mercy. And the thought flashed through my mind that perhaps in some way he had learned of the existence of the letters, and was trying desperately to get them. That thought was enough to swing the balance in his wife's favor.

"I am sure," I said, "that Mr. Vantine would instantly have consented to your client opening the drawer and taking out the letters. And, as his executor, I also consent. But I must warn you, Mr. Hornblower, that I believe two men have already been killed trying to open that drawer," and I told him the story. "I am inclined to think," I concluded, "that Vantine blundered upon the drawer while examining the cabinet, but there is no doubt that the other man knew of the drawer, and also, presumably, of its contents."

"Well!" exclaimed my companion. "I have listened to many astonishing stories in my life, but never one to equal this. And you know nothing of this Frenchman?"

"Nothing except that he came from Havre on La Touraine last Thursday, and drove from the dock direct to Vantine's house."

"My client also came on La Touraine, but that, no doubt, was a mere coincidence."

"That may be," I agreed, "but it is scarcely a coincidence that both he and your client were after the contents of that drawer."

"You mean?"

"I mean that the mysterious Frenchman may very possibly have been an emissary of Monsieur X. Madame may have betrayed the secret to him in an unguarded moment."

Mr. Hornblower rose abruptly. He was evidently much disturbed.

"You may be right," he agreed. "I will communicate with my client at once. I take it that she has your permission to see the cabinet, and if it proves to be the right one that she may open the drawer and remove the letters."

"If she cares to take the risk," I assented.

ADVICE GIVEN ON SECURING WIFE

Minister Says She Should be Good
Cook With Common Sense and
Not One That Paints.

GIVES RULES TO FOLLOW

(By United Press.)
Marion, Ind., Feb. 3.—“Young men, choose as your wife a good cook with common sense.” This advice is given by the Rev. Milford Lyon, evangelist who is conducting successful revival meetings in Marion.

“A girl that paints her face, cramps up her waist, has a putty countenance, is a girl that will be a detriment to any young man who has her as a wife in his home.

“Boys, choose a girl that is good, strong and hearty in her physical health, that can run upstairs without getting winded, a girl that can go out on the athletic field and have a good rosy countenance. No sensible young man ever went to a ball room to get a wife. He might find a social butterfly with whom to have an hour's amusement but when a sensible young man is seeking a wife, that he can trust, he isn't going to take a girl that submits to the embraces of every young devil in the community. He fears that if she consents to such liberties in public she might also in private.”

“Boys, it's one thing to go out with a girl for an evening's amusement, but it's another to choose a life partner and sit across the breakfast table from her every morning as long as you live.”

BEN HUR CHARIOT RACE PALES INTO INSIGNIFICANCE ALONG SIDE THIS

Only Difference is That in the Spectacular Event Here Today There
Were 2 Horses and 3 Men.

NOT 4 HORSES AND 1 MAN

For thrills, without the attending fatal results, a rushing runaway in Perkins street staged by a team of four-year-old horses belonging to Pete Johnson, colored, this morning at eleven o'clock made anything similar that was even seen here pale into insignificance.

The event was very much like the chariot race in Ben Hur except that in Ben Hur there were four horses and one driver, but in the Rushville event there were two horses and three men. But there might as well have been a dozen men for that matter. The effect would not have been more telling on the team of frightened horses.

Ben Willis and Harvey Kennedy were in the wagon with Pete John-

MRS. WALTER PETERS DENIES SHE'S DEAD

She Spends the Day Making the Denial Over the Telephone and Wants to Stop Calls.

DAME RUMOR RESPONSIBLE

Mrs. Walter Peters denies that she is dead. She has been making the denial by telephone all day and she would like the fact stated plainly through the press that there is nothing in the story that she is a corpse. It's all a brazen falsehood.

Miss Dame Rumor, it seems, is all to blame, nothing more, nothing less. Mrs. Peters arrived home late yesterday afternoon only to find a delegation of neighbors on her front porch expecting to break in at any moment to find the corpse. Mrs. Walter Conway, her mother, was in the crowd and she was frantic over what she believed was true news.

R. G. Budd, who had heard the report and who happened to be standing in Hargrove & Mullin's drug store when Mrs. Peters walked in, passed while the neighbors were on the porch and he punctured the myth by explaining that he had just seen Mrs. Peters.

TAX DEMAND MADE OF ROCKEFELLER

Commissioners in Cleveland Believe
He Should Pay on Personal
Property in That City.

AMOUNTS TO $12,690,000

(By United Press.)

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 3.—The local tax commission today demanded that John D. Rockefeller, the oil king, pay $12,690,000 in taxes on his estimated $900,000,000 personal property. The commission claimed Rockefeller has just established his legal residence here and comes under the state tax law. The rate of taxation to which he is subjected is $14.10 on each one thousand dollars of property. The Ohio law stipulates that any person is taxable for the full value of his personal property in the district where he has established his legal residence. Tax collectors appeared at the Rockefeller Forest Hill estate just before noon today. Rockefeller refused to see them. They left a written notice that his taxes are now payable. Rockefeller has five days to pay. If he fails to pay he is subject to fifty per cent. penalty.

son, but the united efforts of the men seemed to make no impression on the frightened colts. They started to run down the Perkins street hill when the wagon ran up on their back legs. They came on down Perkins street at breakneck speed, narrowly missing several vehicles enroute.

It is impossible to predict what would have happened when the horses reached the south end of Perkins street where there is an embankment along the mill race, but the terminus of the race course was a block from there. About the middle of the block between Second and First streets, the “near” horse began slipping on the pavement.

He finally made a fall of it while the team was going as fast as it could run. The inertia of the wagon and the other horse dragged the fallen animal fully fifty feet and spectators fully expected the horse's neck was broken. But as soon as he was cut loose, he got up prancing, with every piece of skin in tact, and ready to run some more.

THEY MUST PAY OWN EXPENSES

County Highway Superintendent and
His Assistants May Dig it Out
of Their “Jeans.”

OPINION BY ATTORNEY HONAN

Superintendent J. C. King Has Plat
of Roads Made and Has Appointed One Deputy.

That the county highway superintendent, J. C. King, and his twelve assistants, will have to “dig down into their own jeans” and pay their expenses out of their salary, is the conclusion to be drawn from an opinion handed down by Thomas M. Honan, attorney general, and received by Allen R. Holden, county auditor.

The highway superintendent will receive four dollars a day and his assistants will receive two dollars and a half a day. The highway superintendent is to name a superintendent for each twenty-five miles of county roads, and this makes necessary the appointment of twelve assistants by Mr. King. Mr. King, as was announced yesterday, has already appointed Benjamin W. Black of Washington township.

The opinion of the state board of accounts relative to the expenses of the superintendent and his assistants received by County Auditor Holden is as follows:

Many inquiries have been addressed to this department regarding the fees and expenses allowed the county highway superintendents and their assistants. (Acts 1913, page 877.) The superintendent shall receive $5 a day for the time he is actually employed in the work of such superintendent in counties having four hundred miles or more of county highways. In counties having less than four hundred miles he shall receive $4 a day for his services. His salary shall be paid out of the gravel road repair fund of the county.

“The statutes make no provision whatever for the payment of any expenses of the superintendent or his assistants. In the absence of such provisions the superintendent and his assistants will be required to take care of their own expenses. Their salary is all that they are entitled to receive from the county. But attention has been called to section 5 of the act which provides that an assistant superintendent ‘when he may deem it necessary shall have the right to use a team and when so doing he shall receive a compensation for the team the sum of fifteen cents an hour.’ The assistant superintendent is entitled to the above allowance only when such team is employed in actual work upon the roads of the county. He is not entitled to such allowance when the team is used by him as a means of conveyance.

“It is one of the duties of the highway superintendent to make a map of all the highways in his county as provided for in this act. No allowance should be made to anyone else for making such a map, nor should the superintendent be made an extra allowance for making it. The act assumed that the board of commissioners will select a superintendent who is qualified to discharge all the duties of the office and one who has knowledge and experience in the work required of him.

“Inquiry has also been made if the superintendent is entitled to a secretary, stenographer or office assistant. The law does not make any provision for such help, therefore, no allowance can be made therefor. Attorney General Honan fully concurs in our construction of the above act. This department is at this time preparing forms for use by the superintendent and assistant superintendents, and the auditor. As soon as they are received from the printer copies of them will be mailed, together with instructions concerning their use.

Dr. Gilberts' Sunday School Class will hold an exchange at the John B. Morris Hardware store Saturday, February 7th. Chickens, cakes, pies, and bread for sale. 28113

Crowd at Noon Lunch to Boom
Chamber of Commerce Membership Canvass is Doubled.

VISITORS ALSO TAKE PART

Ten New Members Are Added Today
and Three Teams Were at Work
This Afternoon For More

The Chamber of Commerce prospects were booming today after the noon lunch at the Windsor hotel which was attended by thirteen men. This is the largest yet of the noon lunch crowds and the campaign for members was discussed enthusiastically.

Three teams were at work this afternoon and indications were that they would have several new members to turn in tomorrow. Ten new members were reported today and it is the hope of the workers that the increase may be doubled tomorrow.

The manufacturing district has not been visited at all yet and there are many men even in the business district of the city who have not been solicited because there are so many members who are enthusiastic, but who feel they can not devote any time to the work.

M. E. Foley of Indianapolis, who is here in the damage suit trial in the circuit court as attorney for the T. H. I. & E. Traction company, was at the luncheon with the boosters today and wished the workers success. He was scheduled to make a short talk on Chamber of Commerce work, but was called away to court before the lunch was finished. Several arrived late.

It is probable that arrangements may be made for both Mr. Foley and W. J. Beckett of Indianapolis, who is also an attorney in the case now on trial, to speak at the luncheon tomorrow at noon. It urged that any men who feel that they can give any time to the project, or even if they have no time to spare, turn out for the noon meetings and talk over the prospects. ## AN UNRULY BULL KNOCKS MAN DOWN

Fatal Injuries Due to Fact
Animal Was Dehorned.

HIS BODY IS BADLY BRUISED

Charles Carr, brother of Owen L. Carr, was painfully injured by a Jersey bull at his farm west of the city yesterday. He started to drive the bull from one field to another and in doing so had to take him down the road. The bull determined to go in the opposite direction from that which Mr. Carr desired he should go. Mr. Carr had a pitchfork to enforce his commands.

The bull did not heed his wishes and went the wrong way. Mr. Carr jugged the animal with the fork and the animal retaliated by knocking him down. Mr. Carr's arm was badly skinned and his body severely bruised. He was not so badly hurt, however, but that he got up and made the bull go into the field where he intended to drive it. The fact that the bull was dehorned saved Mr. Carr from serious or possibly fatal hurts. Dr. Charles H. Parsons was called to dress the wounds.

DAMAGE SUIT STARTED TODAY

$10,000 Demanded of Traction Company For Death of William
Webber Near Greenfield.

CASE HEARD TWICE BEFORE

Both Times the Jury Failed to Reach
Verdict—Brought by Administrator of Estate.

The damage suit of Conrad Ostermeir, administrator of the estate of William E. Webber, deceased, against the Terre Haute, Indianapolis and Eastern Traction company started in the circuit court this morning. A jury was secured by noon and the opening statements were made directly after court opened for the afternoon session. $10,000 is the amount of damages demanded of the traction company.

It is alleged that through carelessness of the company William Webber was killed at a grade crossing. The accident occurred April 12, 1908, at a station known as Gem, which is about twelve miles west of Greenfield on the national road. Mr. Webber was driving along the highway, which parallels the traction line and turned south on the company's right of way. He was hit by a limited car from Indianapolis going to Newcastle. Mr. Webber was almost instantly killed.

It is alleged that the motorman did not blow the whistle until the car was almost on Mr. Webber and that the state law says the warning must be sounded not less than eighty rods from a crossing. W. J. Beckett, one of the attorneys for the plaintiff, in his opening statement to the jury stated that they had five witnesses who would testify that the whistle was not blown until the car was almost upon Mr. Webber.

This is the third time that the case has been tried. The first two times were in Hancock county where the accident occurred. The jury both times failed to reach a verdict and a change of venue was taken, the case eventually reaching this court. It is understood that the last time the case was heard the jury stood nine to three in favor of the defendant company. Webber left a widow and three children. The widow is appearing in court here.

The jury hearing the case is composed of the following men: Perry Gosnell, Jacob W. Hite, Ed V. Jackson, W. M. Bell, E. A. Kirkpatrick, Frank Reddick, Jesse Murphy, James Ed Caldwell, Roy Alexander, Charles N. Sweet, William Webster and John F. McKee.

Judge Megee appointed John Kuntz, John H. Hopp and Edward S. Jarrett appraisers in the suit of Jesse A. Shelton, trustee of Walker township against John L. Webster and Arnetta C. Webster, asking that real estate be assessed. Mr. Shelton desires the land owned by the defendants for a place for a school house. The appraisers are to report within five days according to the ruling of Judge Megee.

I. & C. MEN BEFORE COMMISSION TODAY

Committee of Five Trainmen Present Two Grievances and First
Testimony is Offered.

THEY WANT FLAT WAGE SCALE

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Feb. 3.—Demands for a 35-cent an hour flat wage and better working conditions were made today before the public service commission by a committee of five men representing the trainmen of the Indianapolis & Cincinnati Traction company. The higher cost of living was the principal argument advanced in support of the demands. The company will reply to the men and the first testimony was to be offered this afternoon.

Five articles of grievances were submitted to the commission at the time of the recent strike and three were amicably adjusted without the assistance of the commission. The present wage scale is 21 to 30 cents an hour and the company would not grant the increase asked. The committee, composed of five employees of the road, was as follows: George Schrader, Albert Sparks, Irvin J. Meal, Samuel Warfue and John Wilson.

F. Henry Schwegman has filed suit against Fred Merritt, Dora Merritt and William E. Bissenger, to foreclose a mortgage, demanding $450.

EXPLAINS NEW EXPRESS RATES

Edgar E. Clark, Head of Interstate Commerce Commission, Discusses Changes in Effect Now.

ENDS INQUIRY OF FOUR YEARS

Lower Tariff Prescribed With Firm Belief It Afforded Express Companies Fair Compensation.

(By United Press.)

Washington, Feb. 3.—The most sweeping reduction in express rates ever inaugurated went into effect this week. Before issuing the new rates the Interstate Commerce Commission spent nearly four years in investigating the express business and Chairman Edgar E. Clark, head of the Commission, today consented to give the United Press an interview in which he described the events which culminated in the order which has just become effective.

"It was on June 8, 1912," said Chairman Clark, "that the Commission, through Commissioner Lane, now Secretary of the Interior, issued its first report in the investigation which has been conducted into the matter of express rates, practices, accounts and revenues. This investigation was prompted by a large number of complaints against charges, practices and regulations of express companies, and it was perhaps the most exhaustive and searching investigation the Commission has ever undertaken.

"Full investigation was had and consideration given to the financial affairs of the express companies, character of their organization, relationships they had with the railroads, the extent and nature of their property, the character of their services, basis of their rates, cost of their operation, manner in which their rates were stated, the relation of the service given by the express companies to that given by the railroad in the carriage of freight, the relationship between the rates of the express companies in different sections of the country for the same service, similarities and dissimilarities as between the express service in the United States and similar service in foreign countries, etc.

"Thirteen defendant express companies in 1911 transported more than 300,000,000 packages. They operated over 218,013 miles of steam railroad in the United States; 18,385 miles of steamship and stage lines, and over 6,065 miles of electric lines. They paid to the rail, steamship and electric lines during that year $69,730,895, and their expenses were something over $4,000,000. The express companies' affairs and interests were interwoven through ownership of each others stock.

"Aside from the complaints of excessive charges, the complaints then before the Commission referred more particularly to double collections of lawful charges, overcharges and undercharges effecting discriminations between shippers arising out of an obscure rate system and ineffective accounting, indirect routing of shipments, etc., etc.

"Briefly, the Commission required a sweeping reduction in express charges, a new system of stating rates in tariffs, a new classification, use of prescribed labels for packages to avoid double collection of charges, proper provisions for revision of billing so as to insure collection of the lawful charges, routing arrangements which in effect make all of the express companies one and insure routing via the more direct junction points and lines, the establishment of a directory of free delivery limits, the establishment and reduction of insurance charges on shipments exceeding $50 in value and revision of regulations governing the transportation of shipments.

"On the matter of reduction in rates, the express companies naturally made every effort to convince the Commission that the reductions proposed were too far-reaching but at the end, while still expressing the view that as a matter of law the reductions were not proper, they announced their acceptance of the rates prescribed by the Commission and determination to give them a full and fair trial.

"The new plan necessitated an entire revision of the classifications and tariffs which was a work of such magnitude and which must be carefully done, and in order to provide time in which to do that work, the effective date of the Commission's order was postponed to February 1, 1914, upon which date the new system of rates become effective.

"The Commission prescribed the lower level of rates with the firm conviction that it afforded the express companies reasonable and just compensation for the service performed and a reasonable return upon the full value of all the property which they devote to the public service.

"The contracts between the express companies and the railroads provided that the railroads should receive for their part of the service a certain percentage of the gross earnings from the express business.

"In a general way it may be said that one half of the gross earnings thus went to the railroads.

"In determining the just and reasonable compensation for the express companies the commission did not accept the theory that these contracts between the express companies and the railroads were on a correct or equitable basis."

Awarded Contracts For Construction of Two Roads by County Commissioners Today.

ONE ROAD WAS REJECTED

The county commissioners awarded contracts for two roads this afternoon to Wilk & Company of this city. The two roads were the Fleener road in Jackson township and the Brown road in Orange township. The Hungerford road was also advertised but the commissioners rejected all bids and will readvertise. Wilk and Company was the low bidder on all three of the roads. The Horton road was not let because one of the viewers, Thomas McManus refused to sign, stating that they did not need a road.

The bids on the Fleener road were as follows: Wilk & Company, $4475; William Avery, $5392; William Emsweller, $6073. Only one bid was received on the Brown highway, that of Wilk & Company which was $4276. The Hungerford road, which was rejected attracted more bidders than any of the others. The bids were as follows: Wilk & Co., $4971 and $5591; Emsweller, $4089; Steel, $5190; Henley, $5148; H. Colter, $5360.

Healthy Hair, Free From all Dandruff

Unsightly, matted, scraggy hair is a sign of neglect—of dandruff, the hair destroyer.

Surely use Parisian Sage. It is a scientific preparation, based on a thorough knowledge of what is needed to cleanse the scalp and hair, keeping them perfectly healthy, stop scalp itch and falling hair, and make hair grow.

Get a 60-cent bottle from F. B. Johnson & Co. today—pour a little on a sponge or cloth and rub lightly over the hair, taking a small strand at a time—rub it into the scalp. Presto! the dandruff surely disappears; the hair is free from dust and excessive oil and is doubly beautiful. Try it now—it will not only save your hair and make it soft fluffy and abundant, but give it that incomparable gloss and beauty you desire.

Parcel Post Fails.

The parcel post system which Uncle Sam inaugurated the first of 1913 in the belief that the high cost of living would be throttled and the farmer would be greatly benefited by shipping his produce directly to the consumer in the city has failed utterly in bringing about such results, say officials of the Chicago post-office department. In reality the thing that has occurred is exactly that which the opponents of the parcel post system said would occur—that is, the system has worked out to the entire benefit of the big mail order houses in Chicago and to them alone. The Chicago post-office, which is one of the largest in the country, is now daily jammed to suffocation with parcel post packages which are being sent out by the big mail order houses, while little or no produce is handled as incoming parcels.

The amount of food products that are shipped from agricultural districts today by parcel post is hardly worth considering,” declared Postmaster Campbell recently. “It is true that the friends of the parcel post argued that it would allow people in the cities to get farm products fresh from the country and that the system would cut out the middle man, make more money for the farmers, and cut down the high cost of living for the consumers. That has not been brought about. The farmers themselves do not appear to be clamoring for the parcel post in the handling of their products, and my personal experience is that they are content with the present methods of shipments.”

In the meantime, the mail order merchants in Chicago are saying nothing, but saving wood.

Will It Be Split Trousers?

(By United Press.)
Washington, Feb. 3.—The “Pieddilly coat, the “semor” Norfolk jacket, and the tight-fitting trouser were discussed here today by the International Custom Cutters’ Association at the opening session of a four day convention. The Association is supreme in deciding the styles for men. If they ordered split trousers, split trousers would be the rage.

Many Compliments On New Features Are Received Daily

The Daily Republican has received many compliments for the many improvements it has made lately, including the up-to-the-minute news service which gives in concise but complete form the important happenings of the day outside of Rush county. This service enables the Republican to offer its readers not only the complete and full county news, but also the events of great importance outside.

The Republican is endeavoring to give its patrons all of the local news and a comparison will convince any skeptical person that the Republican gives as much local news as any other county seat newspaper—and then some. The Republican always invited comparison.

PLANS BEING COMPLETED

Forty-nine Counties Will Hold Sunday School Conventions.

(By United Press.)
Indianapolis, Feb. 3.—Plans are being completed by the Indianapolis Sunday School Association for the holding of the county Sunday school conventions in forty-nine counties, during the first half of 1914.

The golden jubilee convention to be held in Indianapolis, June 16 to 18 will be the center of interest in most of these county conventions, because of the competitive effort most of the counties are making to reach the “Front Line Standard of Efficiency,” which will entitle them to special honors in the convention.

Agitation for Abolishing Saturday Night Shopping in Evansville Continues Unabated.

HAVE HEARING ON QUESTION

(By United Press.)
Evansville, Ind., Feb. 3.—The agitation to abolish Saturday night shopping continues unabated. The Retail Merchants’ Association was scheduled to hear tonight from a committee of the Evansville Pastors’ Association which recently voted in favor of Friday night shopping and a Saturday afternoon and night holiday for the clerks.

It has been pointed out that Friday is Jewish service night. Monday night for shopping has been suggested. Mayor Bosse came out against shopping any night and proposed that people do their shopping in the day time, or if necessary, that instead of a half-holiday Saturdays that the shopping be done Saturday afternoon instead of Saturday night.

Mrs. Reiser also claims that her husband is an habitual drunkard and that he would slap and strike her, threaten to kill her, and break up the household furniture. The couple was married July 18, 1907, and separated October 13, 1913. Mrs. Reiser asks that her maiden name, Harris, be restored.

FREE LUNCH IS THING OF PAST

South Bend Saloon Keepers do Away
With it Due to State Health Laws.

MUST PROVIDE A WAITER

(By United Press.)

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 3.—Free lunches in South Bend saloons are partly a thing of the past. And the reason for its banishment given by the saloon keepers is that the state health laws are too rigid for profit.

The patron must not help himself, says the law, but the saloon keeper must provide a waiter to serve it. Each patron must be given his individual sandwich on a plate; the waiter must put it there with a clean fork; and the supply must be continually kept under a cover.

A few saloon keepers pretend to know nothing of the agreement to banish the succulent wienie, and these barkeepers continue the free lunch. They say that the others will soon find it necessary to reinstall the counters.

TELLING THINGS AS HE SEES THEM

Louis Ludlow, Former Washington Correspondent of the Indianapolis Star, Has Own Bureau.

TRUTH ABOUT PROGRESSIVES.

Many Assert New Party Has Fulfilled Its Mission and Return to Republican Fold.

Louis Ludlow, formerly connected with the Indianapolis Star as Washington correspondent, and who in that capacity was hired to write daily obituaries of the Republican party, and who recently severed his connection with that publication to operate a news bureau of his own, has the following unbiased opinion on the bull moose party and its future, which was published in several papers that use Ludlow's service:

The Progressive party, as a potential factor in national affairs, is passing away. There can be no doubt that its best assets are being liquidated with undeviating certainty into the hands of the Republican party and this process of political liquidation is going on steadily. The return of former Progressives to the Republican fold is now proceeding generally throughout the country. The exodus is of course greater in some sections and localities than in others, according to the strength of the middle-of-the-road leadership, but the longing "to go back home" is strong among the rank and file of the Progressives and nearly every community is now furnishing ocular evidence of the disintegration of the Progressive party.

It is generally conceded that there is no more progressively-inclined public man than Senator Bristow of Kansas. He has long been a fighter for progressive reforms. He voted against the Payne tariff bill. When asked his opinion as to the drift of events, he replied:

"I can speak advisedly as to Kansas. I know that in our state the Progressive party is rapidly going to pieces and the former Progressives are resuming their old alignment with the Republican party. The Progressive party, as a party organization, in my opinion, has served its purpose, which was a very laudable purpose, and it has forced reforms in the Republican party which were necessary.

"The possibility of abuses which led to the downfall of the Republican party has been eliminated. There is a very fine disposition on the part of the leaders of the Republican party to respond to the demands of the people and enact progressive legislation and I think the most effective way to help in that work and to serve the people is to remain in the Republican party and fight it out along the same lines as before. We shall win and the reforms which the people have so much at heart will be brought about through the Republican organization. I would like for all Progressives to help instead of dividing our forces and thereby render our work ineffective."

To be convinced that the Progressive party is falling to pieces one has only to glance over the newspaper files of the last few months and particularly the last few weeks. The desertion of former Comptroller Prendergast was a body-blow to the Progressive party in New York state. He is an able, influential, resourceful man. In Pennsylvania the decay of the third party is especially marked. The Bill Flinn element has lost control of the Republican state organization which has passed back into the hands of the old line Republicans. In Pennsylvania at the national election of 1912 the Progressives accomplished most remarkable results, but apparently there is scarcely a skeleton of the Progressive party in that state now. Backed by the full strength of the city administration of Pittsburgh, headed by Mayor Magee and supported by the finances of William Flinn, the Progressive candidate, Mr. Porter was a favorite in the betting, but, despite this help, he was decisively beaten by Joseph Armstrong, who was backed by Senator Penrose. In Philadelphia the Progressives made hardly any showing at all.

The tale is the same in all parts of the country. The Progressives are everywhere returning to the Republican ranks. In New Jersey the Progressives made a lamentable showing. In that state where in 1912 Roosevelt beat Taft badly for second honors, Colby, the Progressive nominee for governor, was a poor third. He failed to carry a single county and his total vote was less than one-third that of Roosevelt.

In Maryland, where in 1912 Roosevelt had a small lead over Taft for second place, George L. Wellington, Progressive, in the election of a United States senator by direct vote of the people, received less than 10 per cent of the vote given Roosevelt.

Registration for the fall election is now going on in the state of California, and it is showing most remarkable results. In 1912 President Taft received some 4,000 votes in the entire state of California, but in this registration the Republicans are leading, with the Democrats second and the Progressives third. In some counties, as shown by the registration the Republicans outnumber the Progressives six to one, which is a pretty heavy slump for a former Roosevelt state. In other states district and county committeemen are resigning in numbers and going back to the Republican party. The recent action of the Republican national committee in directing a revision of the rules so as to embody progressive reforms in party management has given impetus to the movement away from the Progressive party.

If the Legislature Would Pass a Law---

That every vehicle user in Rush County had to buy his vehicles where he could get the best bargain for his money and leave it to the majority of vehicle users in the county to decide, you would have to buy your next one from us or break the law. There is no question about this, as the majority has already decided we give them more value for their money than they can get elsewhere and have backed up their judgment by buying their vehicles from us. The road service you can get out of one of our buggies makes it an easy proposition for us to sell a customer the second time and also makes it easy for us to sell his neighbors and friends as our vehicle users are always satisfied and make us customers. We still have a few of those nice, roomy Storm Buggies in stock and also have a sample of our 1915 Storm Buggy that you want to see. It is the first Storm Buggy ever built that has sliding doors that can not rattle and also has several new features you want to see. Bring your vehicle business to us no matter what it is and we will take care of it.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Mystery of the Boule Cabinet

By BURTON E. STEVENSON

Copyright, 1913, by Burton E. Stevenson.

CHAPTER VIII. A Distinguished Caller.

GODFREY and I examined the windowsill and the ground beneath it when I returned from my fruitless chase. "There is where he stood," he said, and the marks on the sill were evident enough. We went slowly back to the house and Godfrey sat down again to a contemplation of the cabinet. "It's too much for me," he said at last. "The only way I can find that drawer, I'm afraid, is with an ax. I'm going to look up the subject of secret drawers—perhaps I'll stumble upon something that will help me."

"And then, of course," I said disconsolately, "it is quite possible that there isn't any such drawer at all."

But Godfrey shook his head decidedly. "I don't agree with you there, Lester. I'll wager that fellow who was looking in at us could find it in a minute. I'll have another try at it tomorrow. One thing we've got to take care of, and that is that our friend of the burning eyes doesn't get a chance at it first."

"Those shutters are pretty strong," I pointed out. "And Parks is no fool." "Yes," agreed Godfrey, "the shutters are pretty strong—they might keep him out for ten minutes—scarcely longer than that. As for Parks, he wouldn't last ten seconds. This fellow's one of the greatest criminals of modern times. I think I would better drop a word to Simmonds and get him to send down a couple of men to watch the house. With them outside and Parks on the inside it ought to be fairly safe."

"I should think so," I said. "One would imagine you were getting ready to repel an army. Who is this fellow, anyway, Godfrey? You seem to be half afraid of him!"

"I'm wholly afraid of him if he's who I think he is. But it's a mere guess as yet, Lester. Wait a day or two. I'll call up Simmonds."

He went to the phone, while I sat down again and looked at the cabinet in a kind of stupefaction. Godfrey came back while I was still groping blindly amid this maze of mystery. "It's all right," he said. "Simmonds is sending two of his best men to watch the house." He stood for a moment gazing down at the cabinet. "I'm coming back tomorrow to have another try at it," he added. "I have left the gauntlet there on the chair, so if you feel like having a try yourself, Lester."

"Heaven forbid!" I protested. "But perhaps I would better tell Parks to let you in. I hope I won't find you a corpse here, Godfrey!"

"So do I. But I don't believe you will. Yes, tell Parks to let me in whenever I come around. And now about Rogers."

"What about him?" "I rather thought I might want to grill him tonight. But perhaps I would better wait till I get a little more to go on." He paused for a moment's thought. "Yes, I'll wait," he said finally. "I don't want to run any risk of failing."

We went out into the hall together, and I told Parks to admit Godfrey whenever he wished to enter. Rogers was still sitting on the cot, looking so crushed and sorrowful that I could not help pitying him. I said so to Godfrey as we went down the front steps. "Perhaps you're right," he agreed. "Something has happened to him—something in connection with that woman—and he has never got over it. Well, we shall have to find out what it was. Hello! Here are Simmonds' men," he added as two policemen stopped before the house.

"Is this Mr. Godfrey?" one of them asked.

"Yes," said Godfrey.

"Mr. Simmonds told us to report to you, sir, if you were here."

"What we want you to do," said Godfrey, "is to watch the house—watch it from all sides—patrol clear around it and see that no one approaches it."

"Very well, sir." And the men touched their helmets.

"Perhaps if they concealed themselves," I suggested, "the fellow might venture back and be nabbed."

But Godfrey shook his head. "I don't want him to venture back," he said. "I want to scare him off. I want him to see we're thoroughly on guard." He bailed a passing cab and paused with one foot on the step. "I've already told you, Lester," he added over his shoulder, "that I'm afraid of him. Perhaps you thought I was joking, but I wasn't. I was never more serious in my life. The Record office," he added to the caddy and jingled away, leaving me staring after him.

Just before I turned in for the night in my own apartment I heard from Godfrey again, for my telephone rang, and it was his voice that answered. "I just wanted to tell you, Lester," he said, "that your guess was right. The mysterious Frenchman came over on La Touraine, landing at noon yesterday. He came in the steerage and the stewards know nothing about him. What time was it he got to Vantine's?"

"About 2 I should say." "So he probably went directly there from the boat, as you thought. That accounts for nobody knowing him. The steamship company is holding a bag belonging to him. I'll get them to open it tomorrow and perhaps we shall find out who he was. Good night!"

It was shortly after I reached the office next morning that the office boy came in and handed me a card with an awed and reverent air. An awed and reverent feeling crept over me also, for the card bore the name of Sereno Hornblower.

That name is quite unknown outside the legal profession of the three great cities of the east—New York, Boston and Philadelphia—yet Sereno Hornblower's income would make that of any other lawyer in the country look like 30 cents.

He is the confidential attorney of most of our "best families." He has held that position for years, and it is said that no case placed unreservedly in his hands ever resulted in a public scandal.

His reputation for tact and efficiency is tremendous, and yet those who have found themselves opposed to him have never been long in realizing that there was a most redoubtable mailed fist under the velvet glove. I had never met him either professionally or personally, and it was with some eagerness that I told the office boy to show him in at once.

He was a bluff and hearty man of middle age, rather heavy set, fresh faced and clean shaven and with very bright blue eyes.

We shook hands and he sat down and plunged at once without an instant's hesitation into the business which had brought him.

"Mr. Lester," he began, "I understand that you are the administrator of the estate of the late Philip Vantine?"

"Our firm is," I corrected. "But you, personally, have been attending to his business? He was a collector of old furniture, I believe?"

"Yes." "And on his last trip to Europe, from which he returned only a few days ago, he purchased of Armand & Son of Paris a Boule cabinet?"

I could not repress a start of astonishment.

"Are you acting for Armand & Son?" I queried.

"Not at all. I am acting for a lady whom, for the present, we will call Mme. X."

The thought flashed through my mind that Mme. X. and the mysterious Frenchwoman might be one and the same person. Then I put aside the idea as absurd. Sereno Hornblower would never accept such a notion.

"Mr. Vantine did buy such a cabinet," I said.

"And it is in your possession?" "There is at his residence a Boule cabinet which was shipped him from Paris, but only a few hours before his death. Mr. Vantine assured me that it was not the one he had purchased."

"You mean that a mistake had been made in the shipment?" "That is what we supposed, and a cablegram from Armand & Son has since confirmed it."

"Where is the cabinet which Mr. Vantine did buy?" "I have no idea. Perhaps it is still in Paris. But I am expecting a representative of the Armands to call very soon to straighten things out."

Again my companion fell silent, and sat rubbing his chin absently. "It is very strange," he said finally. "If the cabinet was still at Paris, one would think it would have been discovered before my client made inquiry about it."

"There are a good many things which are strange about this whole matter," I supplemented.

"Would you have any objection to my client seeing this cabinet, Mr. Lester?"

It was my turn to hesitate. "Mr. Hornblower," I said finally, "I will be frank with you. There is a certain mystery surrounding this cabinet which we have not been able to solve. I suppose you have read of the mysterious deaths of Mr. Vantine and of an unknown Frenchman, both in the same room at the Vantine house and both apparently from the same cause?"

"Do you mean that this cabinet is connected with them in any way?" he asked quickly.

"We believe so, though as yet we have been able to prove absolutely nothing. But we are guarding the cabinet very closely. I should not object to your client seeing it, but I could not permit her to touch it—not, at least, without knowing why she wished to do so. You will remember that you have told me nothing of why she is interested in it."

"I am quite ready to tell you the story, Mr. Lester," he said. "It is only fair that I should do so. After you have heard it, if you agree, we will take Mme. X. to see the cabinet. My client is a member of a prominent American family—a most prominent family. Three years ago she married a French nobleman. You can perhaps guess her name, but I should prefer that neither of us utter it."

"This nobleman has been both prodigal and unfaithful. He has scattered my client's fortune with both hands. I am free to confess that I consider her a fool not to have left him long ago. At last her trustees interfered, for her father had been wise enough to place a portion of his fortune in trust. They paid her husband's debts, placed him on an allowance and notified his creditors that his debts would not be paid again."

I had by this time, of course, guessed the name of his client.

"The allowance is a princely one," Mr. Hornblower continued, "but it does not suffice Monsieur X. No allowance would suffice him. So he has become a thief. He has taken to selling the objects of art with which his residences are filled and which are really the property of my client, since they were purchased with her money. About two weeks ago my client returned to Paris from a stay at her chateau in Normandy to find that he had almost denuded the town house. Among other things which he had taken was a Boule cabinet, which had been used by my client as her private writing desk. The cabinet was a most valuable one. But it is not its monetary value which makes my client so anxious to recover it."

He paused an instant and cleared his throat.

"Monsieur X. had had the decency," he went on, more slowly, "to, as he thought, retain his wife's private papers. He had caused the contents of the various drawers to be dumped out upon a chair. But there was one drawer of which he knew nothing—a secret drawer, known only to my client. That drawer contained a packet of letters which my client is most anxious to regain. She has given me to understand that their recovery is essential to her peace of mind."

I reflected a faithless husband has no reason to complain if his wife repays him in the same coin.

"My client went to work at once to regain the cabinet," continued Mr. Hornblower, plainly relieved that the thinnest ice had been crossed. "She found that it had been sold to Armand & Son. Hastening to their offices, she learned that it had been resold by them to Mr. Vantine and sent forward to him here. So she came over on the first boat, ostensibly to visit her family, but really to ask Mr. Vantine's permission to open the drawer and take out the letters. His death interfered with this, and in despair she came to me. I need hardly add that no member of her family knows anything about this matter, and it is especially important that her husband should never even suspect it. On her behalf I apply to you as Mr. Vantine's executor to restore these letters to their owner."

I sat for a moment turning this extraordinary story over in my mind. Surely Mme. X. would scarcely guard the secret of that drawer with poison. "Does any one besides your client know of the existence of these letters?" I asked at last.

"I think not," answered Mr. Hornblower, smiling dryly. "They are not of a nature which my client would care to communicate to any one. We must get them back at any cost."

"As a matter of fact," I pointed out, "there are always at least two people who know of the existence of every letter—the person who writes it and the person who receives it."

"I had thought of that, but the person who wrote these letters is dead. He was killed in a duel some months ago by Monsieur X."

Mr. Hornblower sat regarding me, his lips pursed, as an indication, perhaps, that he would say no more.

But there was no necessity that he should. I knew enough of French law and of French habits of thought to realize that if those letters ever came into possession of Monsieur X., the game would be entirely in his hands. His wife would be absolutely at his mercy. And the thought flashed through my mind that perhaps in some way he had learned of the existence of the letters, and was trying desperately to get them. That thought was enough to swing the balance in his wife's favor.

"I am sure," I said, "that Mr. Vantine would instantly have consented to your client opening the drawer and taking out the letters. And, as his executor, I also consent. But I must warn you, Mr. Hornblower, that I believe two men have already been killed trying to open that drawer," and I told him the story. "I am inclined to think," I concluded, "that Vantine blundered upon the drawer while examining the cabinet, but there is no doubt that the other man knew of the drawer, and also, presumably, of its contents."

"Well!" exclaimed my companion. "I have listened to many astonishing stories in my life, but never one to equal this. And you know nothing of this Frenchman?"

"Nothing except that he came from Havre on La Touraine last Thursday, and drove from the dock direct to Vantine's house."

"My client also came on La Touraine, but that, no doubt, was a mere coincidence."

"That may be," I agreed, "but it is scarcely a coincidence that both he and your client were after the contents of that drawer."

"You mean?" "I mean that the mysterious Frenchman may very possibly have been an emissary of Monsieur X. Madame may have betrayed the secret to him in an unguarded moment."

Mr. Hornblower rose abruptly. He was evidently much disturbed.

"You may be right," he agreed. "I will communicate with my client at once. I take it that she has your permission to see the cabinet, and if it proves to be the right one that she may open the drawer and remove the letters."

"If she cares to take the risk," I assented.

To be continued.

SENDS OUT MANY LETTERS
In Effort to Determine to Which Territory Indiana Belongs
(By United Press.)
Indianapolis, Feb. 3.—Banks, all over Indiana have received letters from the Indiana Bankers' Association and the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, asking for information regarding the percentage of reserves in Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis. Officers of the Bankers' Association and a representative of the local Chamber will go to Cincinnati on February 15 to lay before the new currency law organization committee the data compiled. The federal board is trying to determine to which regional reserve bank, Chicago, Cincinnati or St. Louis the state of Indiana belongs.

ADVICE GIVEN ON SECURING WIFE

Minister Says She Should be Good
Cook With Common Sense and
Not One That Paints.

GIVES RULES TO FOLLOW

(By United Press.)

Marion, Ind., Feb. 3.—"Young men, choose as your wife a good cook with common sense." This advice is given by the Rev. Milford Lyon, evangelist who is conducting successful revival meetings in Marion.

"A girl that paints her face, cramps up her waist, has a putty countenance, is a girl that will be a detriment to any young man who has her as a wife in his home.

"Boys, choose a girl that is good, strong and hearty in her physical health, that can run upstairs without getting winded, a girl that can go out on the athletic field and have a good rosy countenance. No sensible young man ever went to a ball room to get a wife. He might find a social butterfly with whom to have an hour's amusement but when a sensible young man is seeking a wife, that he can trust, he isn't going to take a girl that submits to the embraces of every young devil in the community. He fears that if she consents to such liberties in public she might also in private."

"Boys, it's one thing to go out with a girl for an evening's amusement, but it's another to choose a life partner and sit across the breakfast table from her every morning as long as you live."

BEN HUR CHARIOT RACE PALES INTO INSIGNIFICANCE ALONG SIDE THIS

Only Difference is That in the Spectacular Event Here Today There
Were 2 Horses and 3 Men.

NOT 4 HORSES AND 1 MAN

For thrills, without the attending fatal results, a rushing runaway in Perkins street staged by a team of four-year-old horses belonging to Pete Johnson, colored, this morning at eleven o'clock made anything similar that was even seen here pale into insignificance.

The event was very much like the chariot race in Ben Hur except that in Ben Hur there were four horses and one driver, but in the Rushville event there were two horses and three men. But there might as well have been a dozen men for that matter. The effect would not have been more telling on the team of frightened horses.

Ben Willis and Harvey Kennedy were in the wagon with Pete Johnson,

MRS. WALTER PETERS DENIES SHE'S DEAD

She Spends the Day Making the Denial Over the Telephone and Wants to Stop Calls.

DAME RUMOR RESPONSIBLE

Mrs. Walter Peters denies that she is dead. She has been making the denial by telephone all day and she would like the fact stated plainly through the press that there is nothing in the story that she is a corpse. It's all a brazen falsehood.

Miss Dame Rumor, it seems, is all to blame, nothing more, nothing less. Mrs. Peters arrived home late yesterday afternoon only to find a delegation of neighbors on her front porch expecting to break in at any moment to find the corpse. Mrs. Walter Conway, her mother, was in the crowd and she was frantic over what she believed was true news.

R. G. Budd, who had heard the report and who happened to be standing in Hargrove & Mullin's drug store when Mrs. Peters walked in, passed while the neighbors were on the porch and he punctured the myth by explaining that he had just seen Mrs. Peters.

TAX DEMAND MADE OF ROCKEFELLER

Commissioners in Cleveland Believe
He Should Pay on Personal
Property in That City.

AMOUNTS TO $12,690,000

(By United Press.)

Cleveland, Ohio, Feb. 3.—The local tax commission today demanded that John D. Rockefeller, the oil king, pay $12,690,000 in taxes on his estimated $900,000,000 personal property. The commission claimed Rockefeller has just established his legal residence here and comes under the state tax law. The rate of taxation to which he is subjected is $14.10 on each one thousand dollars of property. The Ohio law stipulates that any person is taxable for the full value of his personal property in the district where he has established his legal residence. Tax collectors appeared at the Rockefeller Forest Hill estate just before noon today. Rockefeller refused to see them. They left a written notice that his taxes are now payable. Rockefeller has five days to pay. If he fails to pay he is subject to fifty per cent. penalty.

son, but the united efforts of the men seemed to make no impression on the frightened colts. They started to run down the Perkins street hill when the wagon ran up on their back legs. They came on down Perkins street at breakneck speed, narrowly missing several vehicles enroute.

It is impossible to predict what would have happened when the horses reached the south end of Perkins street where there is an embankment along the mill race, but the terminus of the race course was a block from there. About the middle of the block between Second and First streets, the "near" horse began slipping on the pavement.

He finally made a fall of it while the team was going as fast as it could run. The inertia of the wagon and the other horse dragged the fallen animal fully fifty feet and spectators fully expected the horse's neck was broken. But as soon as he was cut loose, he got up prancing, with every piece of skin in tact, and ready to run some more.

THEY MUST PAY OWN EXPENSES

County Highway Superintendent and
His Assistants May Dig it Out
of Their "Jeans."

OPINION BY ATTORNEY HONAN

Superintendent J. C. King Has Plat
of Roads Made and Has Appointed One Deputy.

That the county highway superintendent, J. C. King, and his twelve assistants, will have to "dig down into their own jeans" and pay their expenses out of their salary, is the conclusion to be drawn from an opinion handed down by Thomas M. Honan, attorney general, and received by Allen R. Holden, county auditor.

The highway superintendent will receive four dollars a day and his assistants will receive two dollars and a half a day. The highway superintendent is to name a superintendent for each twenty-five miles of county roads, and this makes necessary the appointment of twelve assistants by Mr. King. Mr. King, as was announced yesterday, has already appointed Benjamin W. Black of Washington township.

The opinion of the state board of accounts relative to the expenses of the superintendent and his assistants received by County Auditor Holden is as follows:

Many inquiries have been addressed to this department regarding the fees and expenses allowed the county highway superintendents and their assistants. (Acts 1913, page 877.) The superintendent shall receive $5 a day for the time he is actually employed in the work of such superintendent in counties having four hundred miles or more of county highways. In counties having less than four hundred miles he shall receive $4 a day for his services. His salary shall be paid out of the gravel road repair fund of the county.

"The statutes make no provision whatever for the payment of any expenses of the superintendent or his assistants. In the absence of such provisions the superintendent and his assistants will be required to take care of their own expenses. Their salary is all that they are entitled to receive from the county. But attention has been called to section 5 of the act which provides that an assistant superintendent 'when he may deem it necessary shall have the right to use a team and when so doing he shall receive a compensation for the team the sum of fifteen cents an hour.' The assistant superintendent is entitled to the above allowance only when such team is employed in actual work upon the roads of the county. He is not entitled to such allowance when the team is used by him as a means of conveyance.

"It is one of the duties of the highway superintendent to make a map of all the highways in his county as provided for in this act. No allowance should be made to anyone else for making such a map, nor should the superintendent be made an extra allowance for making it. The act assumed that the board of commissioners will select a superintendent who is qualified to discharge all the duties of the office and one who has knowledge and experience in the work required of him.

"Inquiry has also been made if the superintendent is entitled to a secretary, stenographer or office assistant. The law does not make any provision for such help, therefore, no allowance can be made therefor. Attorney General Honan fully concurs in our construction of the above act. This department is at this time preparing forms for use by the superintendent and assistant superintendents, and the auditor. As soon as they are received from the printer copies of them will be mailed, together with instructions concerning their use.

Dr. Gilberts' Sunday School Class will hold an exchange at the John B. Morris Hardware store Saturday, February 7th. Chickens, cakes, pies, and bread for sale.
